CHIPS.

"Nothing new under the sun" is an old and trite saying, applicable to yesterday's events in this city.

A little girl hearing the heart mentioned, said: "Mother, is it my heart that cries when you sold me?"

The Provo River is very high, and still rising. Provo City is the only point at which it can be crossed in safety.

The laying of the water mains on First East street is progressing favorably, as is that on North Temple street.

California green peas, Utah asparagus and mushrooms were the epicurean inducements of yesterday's market.

Our city and country teamsters are very careful since the numerous arrests under the ordinance relating to hitching and unhitching teams.

It is sad to contemplate the ignorance of the weather clerk. Here he is overlooking this section with moisture, and the freight rate at old figures.

A party of officials of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, in a special car of their own line, came in yesterday, and after making a tour of the city proceeded westward.

On the Monday morning train over the narrow gauge there will be three sleepers, all places in which are now engaged, one being a special for a party of South Americans.

The loafers on the street corners were playing their trade yesterday in large numbers, but they are broke and can't get drunk as they can't get trust, and the occupation of the marshal and his fiery-eyed myrmidons is gone.

There was a collision between two street cars on Main street at 3.30 yesterday afternoon, in which a boy named Angell, supposed to be a son of the architect of the Temple, was quite badly hurt. One car was considerably smashed.

It has been arranged that John B. Gough will deliver a lecture in the Salt Lake Theatre on the evening of May 23d. He will reach the city on the 22d and remain until the following Sunday. The subject of his lecture has not yet been decided upon.

Pere Hyacinth will give an address this evening at 8 o'clock in the Methodist church, in which it is understood he will touch on theology generally, and Mormonism in particular. Even those who cannot understand French enjoy the Pere's addresses.

It is expected that Judge Hunter will give his decision in the London Bank question on Tuesday, as to whether W. H. H. Bowers can maintain his attachment on so insignificant a bond. Depositors and others interested would like to see something done, if it were only the payment of their deposits.

DOMESTIC BLISS.

Some Beauties of Housekeeping a la Mode.

If any citizen having a good little cottage of two rooms, wants to exchange it for a first-class, two-storied, bay-windowed mansion, in one of the upper wards, now is his chance.

The house is not haunted, nor is there any goblin, "white lady" or other riff-raff, which visits it periodically to make each particular hair like the quills upon the fretful porcupine. It isn't mortgaged, infested with rats, nor infected with malaria or scarlet fever, and in fact there is nothing objectionable about the house that the present proprietor knows of—except that it is rather too large for one woman, with a family and urgent social duties to attend to, and necessitates the keeping of from one to three domestics, who so far as the experience of this witness goes, are calculated to drive an average woman to a lunatic asylum in a few weeks, and are warranted to break up everything like domesticity in a month. The cottager who wishes to exchange can take all the appointments of the mansion, and the servants into the bargain.

What must be expected from the servants can be partly appreciated from the following playful ways which have lately characterized their conduct; you might manage these matters after my own fashion.

They will do whatever they are bidden immediately it suits their convenience, and you should never hurry them for fear of hurting their feelings. If dinner is two hours late, never mind; your appetite will have been satisfied by the delay, and the best part of the meal will be duly discussed in the kitchen by the cook and chambermaid and their young men. Never find any fault with anything, for that is interfering with their liberty. If they scour your solid silver forks and spoons with brick-dust, grit your teeth and bear it like a man; if in your absence they employ your comb or tooth brush, increase their wages at once, and buy them each a full set of toilet articles. Never insist that bathing is a necessity, or that they should put themselves to the inconvenience of indulging in such a superfluity, for, in the first place, they might take cold, and in the second, it would shorten the blissful period they enjoy so much of looking out the hall window at duds and dandies.

When you are out of an evening it is well to give them every opportunity in your power to cultivate the finer arts, music, card-playing, etc., in the drawing room. Bring them up plenty of wood and coal, and give the cook the key to the wine closet. If you come in at about midnight, and they are still having a convivial time with their friends and relations in the parlor, seal as quietly as you can to the ladder for any refreshments you may require, and then go quietly to bed, and warn your husband to wait lightly for fear of disturbing the happy hearts of innocent youth. If they continue to play their little games till 3 or 4 a. m., and to laugh merrily, even though it may disturb you a little, content yourself with the thought that they are happy, and that you are the donor of all their joy. This is my way, and I'm certain that there never was a plan tried in Salt Lake which gave the average domestic companion for indeed you must not speak of them as servants, such perfect satisfaction.

Always leave your front door unlocked so that young gentlemen friends of the domestic companions may go in when they call without the delay and trouble of ringing the bell. This indicates the hearty welcome which you accord to them, and proves conclusively that you won't blame them for the disappearance of silver spoons or any other little trifle you may miss. The deponent wishes to make this exchange for the sole reason that she is afraid she will not be able to grant in the above manner, all that her "domestic companions" deserve, and she therefore desires to transfer this sacred responsibility to some one who can fulfill it conscientiously.

The Iron County Extension.

When the Utah Central is extended, the route has been laid out. Bishop Sharp states it will run from Milford along the western base of the range that encircles Iron County. The grade will be all that can be desired, running as it does along the desert of which the southwestern portion of the Territory is composed. The vast and arid waste is as level as a place can well be. The only difficulty to be experienced is the absence of water. The distance from Milford to Iron Springs by the proposed route is not less than fifty miles, and it is the opinion that wells will have to be sunk should the road be pushed. It will be a good thing if the railroad company should make the test as to whether water can be found there. If artesian wells are practicable in that arid plain, it is impossible to foretell what may be looked for through the medium of the boring apparatus.

Wholesale Buyers.

250 cases of Fur, Beaver, Wool and Straw Hats for Men and Boys, in the latest styles and shades, offered to the trade at very low figures at L. GOLDBERG'S.

Teachers' Association.

At the meeting of the Teachers' Association of Salt Lake county, Saturday 26th, the following programme was rendered. After roll call and prayer by C. F. Wilcox, the minutes of previous meeting were read and accepted.

Mr. Thomas B. Higham gave a brief lecture on corporal punishment. He said pupils entered school with ideas and principles already inculcated. The teacher must take things as they exist. The schoolroom should be neither a playground nor a prison house; but the pupils must conform to certain requirements. He was strictly in favor of corporal punishment under some circumstances.

Miss Susie Winters, in a lucid manner explained the metric system. It is legalized in the United States, though not obligatory. She thought it should be taught in the district schools.

Mr. Wm. Bradford made some very useful suggestions in his remarks on ventilation. He explained several methods of obtaining fresh air, and said with modern improvements, there would be almost perfect ventilation.

Miss Emma Finch, on the conduct of primary classes, sent a note of apology to the association, as she was necessarily absent.

President Morgan for a short time continued the subject of ventilation. He also showed the necessity of teaching good manners in the district schools.

The programme for the next meeting was read, and the association adjourned for two weeks.

Bloating in Cattle.

The season is now commencing when cattle, and especially milch cows, are liable to suffer from eating too freely of the new green clover and lucern. The following is a very simple and efficacious remedy used in France, and is a certain cure for this commonly fatal disease, if used promptly. It has been known to recover cattle after they have been so far gone as to fall down upon their fore legs. The volatile spirit of ammonia gives instantaneous relief, its action being chemical, in decomposing the gas generated in the animal's stomach by fermentation. The dose for a cow or ox is a tablespoonful, for a sheep a teaspoonful, diluted in water or any convenient liquid. If not effectual repeat the dose. We would recommend all owners of cattle to procure a small bottle of the volatile spirit of ammonia, so as to have it on hand ready in case of emergency.

Bad Butter.

In your issue of the 23d I see a nonsensical howl about oleomargarine having been brought here and sold for butter. Now I sold at auction on Monday last 13,000 pounds of creamy butter that was shipped here last December, which was stored in a basement together with coal oil, onions and other vegetables, and of course became rancid. A man who knew no better than to treat butter in that way should get six months in the county jail, twice a year. The butter was manufactured in one of the best creameries in Nebraska. Low freight going into effect soon after the arrival of the butter and the shipment being too large he came to grief, but it was originally, and a part of it still is, better butter than is generally made in this Territory.

Respectfully,
H. A. REED, Auctioneer.

That Statue.

To form a just idea of the truth of the likeness to the original in Mr. Dill's statue of Brigham Young it is necessary to see a photograph of the work which the sculptor has just had taken. This photo, though a poor one in itself, is an exact likeness of the late Mormon leader as he appeared in life. Every feature and characteristic of his singularly forcible countenance, is there completely brought out, the photo revealing many of the finer lines which are concealed to some extent in the cold plaster in which the work is wrought. You should see this photo.

The Emigrants.

Word received by telegraph from Ogden at a late hour last night stated that the emigrants would reach there at 7 o'clock this morning. At what hour they will arrive in Salt Lake will be determined by the church authorities, but it is probable they will come down on the Utah Central, arriving at 10 o'clock today.

THE LATE CONVENTION.

Some Evil Effects of the Mob Affair.

Editors Herald:

The late Republican convention held in the United States Courtroom, will live in the memories of those who were present, as one of the most disgraceful political exhibitions ever in the city. The spirit of the conspiracy, from its inception, was incendiary, and wholly devoid of any characteristics of decency, fairness, or republicanism. Such a barefaced outrage must necessarily have its legitimate effect for good, among many of the less thoughtful ones who allow themselves too often to be used as the tools of the wire-pullers. On this "suspicious occasion," the wires were too plainly manifest, as it was clear that a wayfarer man, though a tool, could not err therein. Perhaps on no occasion have the sharpers of the "Liberal" ranks more completely shown their hands. To talk about Republicanism, in connection with a dog-fight affair, as that was, is enough to make a man swear that he was born a Democrat. When that injudicious zealot said: "It is Governor Murray first, last, and all the time," he stuck his foot clear down his throat; for however distinctly it may have been understood that such was the cry of the office-hunters, it had not been deemed advisable to paint it in communitistic colors on their dirty banner at that juncture. The manipulation of the ignorant colored element, by the "First, last, and all the time" party, was painfully apparent.

By the raising of the right, or the left thumb, the yells were produced with the certainty of the stops on an organ. The cov humana, or the cov diabolica, sent its choriferous choros or discords through the tainted air, by the "rule of thumb," and accordingly as the melody was produced by a first, last, and all the time, aspirant for office under the "Plumed Knight," so was the humana stop thumped into use. Just as surely did the diabolica stop, emit its horrid din, whenever there seemed to be the slightest indication of the playing of another, and a better air. Better air, by the by was badly needed; we were told that it was the air of freedom, but it had the odor of decomposition.

Several times I shut my eyes and tried to convince myself that the fellows who were running the machine were the same ones who had so long protested against the political dolings of "The People's Party" in Utah; it was no use; I had to open my eyes, and smell their breath, before I could believe it. There they were, however, Blanche, Tray and Sweetheart, yelling, and howling, "first, last, and all the time," all together one after the other, like the primary singing school of olden time. The Murray F. L. A. A. T. party, after having elected the cuttings and dried chairman were solid, and the Tribune, the plumed knight and the Hoar amendment clique were on top. A photograph of their countenances by the instantaneous process at this moment, would have removed all doubts as to the total depravity hypothesis. Reflected upon the face of the chairman were all the sentiments of the F. L. A. A. T. aspirants, and it almost overpowered him. Talk about an hypothesis! Talk about the look of a victor in a great game of poker, or the hero of a church fair! Talk about plumed knights! Bah! You should have been there.

I learned recently that one of the reporters made a slight error in the sound of the words "plumed knight," and wrote it "doomed wight." Of course you can take your choice.

The effect of such an affair as the convention spoken of will be found to be wider and deeper than its projectors and managers imagine. It should be kept alive in the memories of all freemen in Utah, who learn thereby that to be a slave to any kind of political machine, is no more dignified than to be a slave to some other kind. To boast of freedom and to act as slaves is the part of the most degraded being on earth. To say that the brand of political slavery was not apparent on the very countenances of the bull-dozing manipulators of the late convention, is as to say that they are fair representatives of real Republicanism.

There is something more in the great party than was made manifest on that occasion, but these unworthy representatives seemed to care no more for the party than they did for the feelings of the men who, though they happened to be in the minority, were their equals in intellect, morality and loyalty, beyond all question. It is safe to say that if an exhibition had been specially arranged to injure the standing of the Republican of Utah, nothing more effectual could have been concocted than the disgraceful showing made by the dominant party on that day.

From all such Republicans and Republicanism, Good Lord deliver us.

The Rural Outlook.

SALT LAKE CITY, April 26, '84.

Editors Herald:

Is not this an extraordinary season? Our winter, the severest part of it, was more than a month later than usual, and the spring is almost as far behind time. Not barley, though, for grass, hay and early grain. Very fortunate to be those who are awake and thrifty farmers who took time by the forelock and put in their wheat before the frequent rains of the present month. March is the good and great wheat sowing month, and serenely self-satisfied is the farmer who comes up to April conference with his wheat seed all in the ground. He can attend the meetings with calmness and without any fidgetiness about meteorological matters. He doesn't care if conference continues a whole week. He is not in any hurry. He has got well through his spring haste. While the poor fellow who has not got his wheat in nor his early plowing done, is all on thorns to be back home again, especially if the weather happens to be favorable for working the soil.

Have you heard what the harvest is likely to be as to fruits? I have not noticed much prospect yet for many peaches or apricots. But it is not unlikely that we shall have considerable crops of other fruits, as well as of grain, hay and potatoes. The farmers have a good time before them; the soil is wet enough, with lots of snow in the mountains. Happy men those farmers are, jolly dogs, and independent as anybody. They always have plenty to eat; they have the first pick and choice at all the substantial, while we city people, following other pursuits, have to take secondary chances at Dame Nature's table.

Just So.

A Nuisance.

About a block north of the Warm Springs bath house, and on the road leading out of town in that direction, there is a street running west through the meadows, and down to the Utah Central track near the large refining works. At the eastern extremity of this street, and in close proximity to the main road running north, is situated what might be considered a very dangerous nuisance. Exposed to the action of the atmosphere and festering in the hot sun, are the carcasses of several defunct animals while the street is literally strewn with the refuse from slaughter houses, tanneries or other similar places. A person who had occasion to be in that vicinity a few days ago, informs us that the effluvia arising from this accumulation of decaying matter was simply awful. The day was warm and sunny and thousands of flies were revelling in the putrid masses, while every breeze carried the abominable stench for a long distance. Now that so many dwellings are being erected not much more than a block south of this fearful spot is it not time such a nuisance was abated? It would be more conducive to public health if all such decaying animal matter was properly buried, and not left to contaminate the atmosphere.
